

Here's what I did today. We had to be ready for work at 7.30am. It was cold outside. We had to put on our coats. We had two pairs of socks on inside our wellies.

Getting ready for work.

Then we went off to feed the pigs. You should hear the noise they make. And the smell! You have to mix the food and slosh it in. They chomp it up really fast. No manners at all, I'm telling you.

The little ones are really sweet. I counted eight of them and they are only three weeks old.

Then we drove the sheep out of the barn and into the field. Lots of them had baby lambs.

They make me giggle, the way they run around and leap about. They're so funny.

After breakfast we saw a lamb actually being born. I helped to pull her out. She was all slimy and steaming, but so beautiful. We're calling her Molly, after Molly Parsons, because it's her birthday today.

Then we went off for a long walk all around the farm, feeding hay to the sheep and counting them to make sure they were all there.
